Suspending the application of the rules on extended producer responsibility for waste, waste electrical and electronical equipment and single use plastic waste (Omnibus VIII on environmental legislation)

Amendments adopted by the European Parliament on 20 October 2026 on the proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council suspending the application of the rules on the appointment of authorised representatives for extended producer responsibility for waste, waste electrical and electronical equipment and single use plastic waste (COM(2025)0983 - C10-0339/2025 - 2025/0396(COD))¹

(3a) Producers placing products on the market in several Member States are currently subject to divergent registration procedures, reporting formats and information requirements under extended producer responsibility schemes. Such fragmentation creates unnecessary administrative burdens and compliance costs and could hinder the proper functioning of the internal market. In order to support the free movement of goods while ensuring effective implementation and enforcement of extended producer responsibility obligations, pending the application of the [Circular Economy Act], Member States should facilitate the exchange of information concerning producer registrations, compliance status and enforcement actions. In addition, the Union should take the necessary action to ensure the establishment of interoperable digital systems and common reporting requirements enabling producers to fulfil administrative obligations across the Union through simplified and harmonised procedures.

(4) In particular, due to that lack of harmonisation, in particular regarding the current provisions in sectoral legislation for the appointment of an authorised representative for extended producer responsibility, the fulfilment of the obligations related to the appointment may result in an unnecessary administrative burden on producers operating in multiple Member States where

Amendment

(4) The administrative burden associated with the appointment of authorised representatives for extended producer responsibility obligations can be disproportionately burdensome for micro and small enterprises engaging in cross-border activities within the Union, due to the limited administrative and financial capacity of such enterprises. While such enterprises

they are not established. Particularly for small and medium-sized enterprises, the obligation to appoint authorised representatives separately for every Member State where the producer places products on the market poses a significant challenge in terms of costs. With a view to ensuring equal conditions for producers established in the Union, it is important that the rules for appointing an authorised representative for extended producer responsibility in Directives 2008/98/EC⁶, 2012/19/EU⁷ and (EU) 2019/904⁸ of the European Parliament and of the Council have the same content. The currently fragmented legal framework for different products and the significant administrative burden associated with fulfilling the requirement to appoint an authorised representative for extended producer responsibility in up to 26 Member States is hampering the competitiveness of producers established in the Union. It is thus crucial to harmonise the existing rules effectively and promptly, reducing the associated burdens on producers. To this effect, the Commission is currently reviewing the effectiveness, the administrative burden entailed and the unintended barriers for the internal market, of the obligation to appoint authorised representatives as a safeguard for the producers' compliance with the 'polluter pays' principle. This review is likely to lead to alternative represent the majority of companies active on the Union market, they account for a comparatively limited share of the overall volume of products put on the market. A targeted and temporary suspension of the obligation to appoint an authorised representative would therefore contribute to reducing unnecessary administrative burdens where they are most significant, while preserving the authorised representatives for larger companies, such as medium and large enterprises.

solutions which are more effective and less burdensome.

Amendment

(4a) The suspension introduced by this Directive should be limited to the administrative requirement concerning the appointment of an authorised representative and should not affect any other obligations of producers with regards to extended producer responsibility or any environmental objectives set out in Union law.

(5) With a view to simplifying requirements on producers, and reducing the administrative burden, producers of textile, textile-related or footwear, electrical and electronical equipment and single use plastic products ('producers') should be able to choose whether they appoint an authorised representative for extended producer responsibility when making available products on the market of another Member State where they are not established. Therefore, Member States should not make the appointment of an authorised representative for extended producer responsibility mandatory for producers established in the Union, but the option for producers to appoint an authorised representative for extended producer responsibility at their discretion should be maintained. This allows producers who have already appointed an authorised representative for extended producer responsibility to retain their existing arrangements, while immediately alleviating the costs and administrative burden for producers who wish to not appoint an authorised representative for extended producer responsibility.

(6) Ensuring traceability and enforcement with regards to producers established in third countries is more challenging compared to those operating within the Union, as such producers fall outside the territorial scope of Member States' enforcement powers and are not covered by the Union administrative and judicial cooperation mechanisms that facilitate the enforcement of obligations and judgments within the internal market. Making the appointment of an authorised representative for extended producer responsibility voluntary for producers established in third countries could thus increase the risk of freeriding, where producers do not fulfil their legal obligations such as registration, reporting, providing a guarantee or participating in a collective scheme, and could create loopholes for non-compliant producers established in third countries. Thus, the provision in Directive 2008/98/EC that allows Member States to provide that a producer established in a third country and making textile, textile-related or footwear products available for the first time on their territory by means of distance contracts directly to end-users is to appoint, by written mandate, a legal or natural person established on their territory as its authorised representative for the purpose of

(8a) The simplification measures introduced by this Directive should be temporary, pending the application of forthcoming reform and should not lead to reduced traceability, enforcement capacity, or compliance with extended producer responsibility. Therefore, this Directive should cease to apply once that broader horizontal reform on authorised representatives becomes applicable. in order to provide legal consistency.

Amendment

(8b) It is necessary that the comprehensive reform of the extended producer responsibility system being undertaken by the Commission establish a harmonised framework of the extended producer responsibility system to facilitate cross-border compliance and ensure interoperability of national EPR schemes, by addressing, among other things, the underlying causes of fragmentation. It is necessary that it introduce harmonised definitions, common minimum requirements for EPR schemes, harmonised fee structures, standardised reporting and data formats, and a Union wide digital one-stop shop for producer registration and compliance. In addition, it needs to strengthen Union-wide monitoring, as well as enforcement, including through the assessment of alternative compliance, traceability and enforcement mechanisms.
